Critical Friends Group® Coaches' Training

VIRTUALLY

For more than 25 years we've helped educators gather around tables to build trust, engage in deep reflection and collaboration, address complicated dilemmas, and improve our work practices. With the arrival of COVID-19, we've learned to do all that in virtual settings. Our virtual protocols WORK to build trust and improve practice even through computer screens!

Is this the year you become a Virtual CFG® Coach?

LET'S TALK SOON, TO HELP YOU IMPROVE YOUR PRACTICE AND CONNECT WITH OTHERS.

Eight sessions, 3-3.5 hours each

We meet synchronously via Zoom, no more than 3.5 hours at a time (with a break in the middle). You'll also complete about five hours of homework to be certified. Pick the dates you want: ideally, the first 5 or 6 happen in rapid succession, but you have options.

Connect deeply through screens

We used to think we needed to be in the same rooms to connect. But Necessity is the mother of Invention, and we've adapted our protocols and activities (and developed new ones) to enable deep collaboration and connection even via Zoom.

Actual practice sessions

This isn't a "sit-and-git" training: you will be actively engaged throughout each training session. To be certified, you'll practice presenting, facilitating, and tech hosting these materials. So when you start CFG work in a virtual setting, you'll be ready.

Become certified to create and lead CFG communities virtually

Regularly gathering with trusted colleagues – even if it needs to be online – can substantially improve our well-being as well as our teaching practice. Coaching these groups demonstrates your leadership and improves your facilitation skills.
